Hi Ginny,

We can't tell anyone whether or not they should purchase a home – that's their personal decision. What we can say about the B Braun facility is that it no longer is on EPA's list of high priority ethylene oxide emission sources. The facility has installed controls to reduce their emissions. EPA is planning to hold a virtual public meeting sometime in Sept-Oct timeframe. If you can give me the citizen's contact info, I'll make sure he gets the information about the virtual public meeting.

Terri,

A citizen that was planning to buy a home located 12 miles from the B. Braun Ethylene Oxide sterilization plant in Bethlehem called this morning. He wants to know if he should go through the purchase of the house. He wants to know if the realtor was suppose to notify him about the hazardous emissions from this plant? Was the EPA supposed to notify the public?

Do you suggest that I send this query to ARD? PADEP?

Ginny
